PRESIDENT'S REPORT

ARPA's 75th Anniversary has provided an opportunity to celebrate the Association's rich history and the lasting impact of the recreation and parks sector across Alberta. It has also been a time to look ahead, ensuring ARPA remains well positioned to support members and champion the benefits of recreation and parks for generations to come.

A key focus this year has been strengthening the organization's long-term sustainability. The Board of Directors has been reviewing ARPA's governance model to ensure it remains relevant, responsive, and connected to members. Proposed changes include a smaller, more strategic Board supported by new committees and networks that will strengthen engagement with members, partners, and the broader sector. Implementation will begin at this year's Conference and continue over the coming year.

Supporting this work is a new strategic plan, featuring an updated purpose statement and refreshed core values. The plan prioritizes organizational sustainability, stronger partnerships, and continued responsiveness to the evolving needs of members.

Like many organizations, ARPA experienced both challenges and successes this year. The Community Compass program concluded as planned, leaving behind a collection of evergreen resources that will continue supporting a diverse workforce across the recreation and parks sector. Following a temporary funding pause, Communities ChooseWell has resumed and will continue advancing healthy eating and active living, with a particular focus on rural and Indigenous communities.

Strong partnerships remain central to ARPA's work. Collaboration with Alberta's Ministry of Tourism and Sport continues to grow, including the transition of Winter Walk Day and Ageless Motion Day from SHAPE Alberta to ARPA. Nationally, ARPA continues to contribute through the Canadian Parks and Recreation Association, supporting initiatives such as the renewal of the National Framework for Recreation and Parks in Canada, CAN Active Insights, and the Advocacy Capacity Building Initiative.

The 75th Anniversary celebrations brought together alumni, members, partners, and the public through events held across the province in June. These celebrations complemented an expanded June is Recreation and Parks Month campaign, helping showcase the many ways recreation and parks contribute to healthier people, stronger communities, and vibrant environments.

Looking ahead, the future is bright. New programs, services, and opportunities will be introduced over the coming year to better support members and continue advancing recreation and parks throughout Alberta. Thank you to our members, partners, volunteers, and staff for your continued commitment and for helping shape the next chapter of ARPA's legacy.

Sincerely,

Katie Biberdorf - ARPA President

RECONCILIATION

Making Relatives

As ARPA celebrates its 10-yr reconciliation journey, we were able to highlight this work at our 75th Anniversary events in both Calgary and Edmonton in June. Participants engaged in several experiential learning opportunities that deepened their understanding of Indigenous cultures and traditions. These included assisting with the raising of a tipi, participating in cultural crafts, being immersed in an Elder dialogue, and joining a community round dance. By leading with this values-based framework, ARPA demonstrated how recreation and parks can serve as spaces that advance reconciliation, promote respect, and support anti-racism through collective action.

Thanks to both the Government of Alberta and the Government of Canada for funding these events.

The Creation of a Brand New Anti-Racism Action Map

ARPA was also pleased to announce ARPA's forthcoming Anti-racism Action Map for Alberta's recreation and parks sector. This new map is meant to complement ARPA's existing Walking With Indigenous Communities: Action Map. Its theme is combatting racism using the Indigenous concept of 'making relatives' and is intended to provide recreation and parks-based organizations, as well municipalities, with practical guidance for advancing equity and inclusion. The creation of this new resource will happen in collaboration with Indigenous Elders and partners throughout 2026 with completion anticipated by the fall of 2027.

Thanks to the Government of Alberta for supporting this new initiative.

A Commitment to Education

This past year also highlighted the creation of two key resources focused on reconciliation-based education for the recreation and parks sector. We were excited to launch a new resource: the Two-Spirit Toolkit. This toolkit was designed to help support the understanding of what Two-Spirit means and what it can look like to take action to support Two-Spirit folks across Alberta. ARPA also introduced Communities ChooseWell's new 'Indigenous Peoples in Recreation and Sports Settings' e-module.

PROGRAMS

Communities ChooseWell

Communities ChooseWell is a program that inspires healthy living champions across Alberta to transform their communities into places where eating well and being active are easy choices for everyone. The partnership between ARPA and our funder, the Ministry of Primary and Preventative Health Services, demonstrates the joint commitment by the recreation and health sectors to improving the health and wellbeing of Albertans and their communities.

Community Compass

The Community Compass initiative wrapped up in March 2026 after three years of funding provided by Alberta Jobs, Economy, Trade and Immigration.

Community Compass was designed to address workforce shortages in Alberta's recreation and parks sector while improving access to employment for equity-deserving groups. The project focused on increasing awareness of recreation careers, supporting job-seekers through training and resources, and helping employers build more inclusive hiring and workplace practices.

Overall, Community Compass contributed to increased awareness of recreation careers, improved employer capacity, and expanded access to training and employment pathways. The project also highlighted ongoing challenges, including language barriers and limited capacity for hands-on experiences, reinforcing the need for continued investment in inclusive workforce development across the sector.

The Community Compass work will stay alive through evergreen and legacy content and resources shared on the ARPA website. ARPA will continue to leverage the resources developed to build on the momentum of the initiative, including having a focus on career awareness for the recreation and parks sector.

June is Recreation & Parks Month (JRPM)

ARPA celebrated June is Recreation & Parks Month (JRPM), emphasizing the vital role recreation and parks play in fostering healthy, active, and connected communities across Alberta. The month-long celebration featured weekly themes, an engaging activity guide, and a dynamic social media contest, encouraging participation and awareness among individuals and organizations. This year's JRPM theme was #Recreation&ParksMatter and was all about recognizing the vital role that recreation and parks play in building healthy, active, and connected communities.

A new addition to this year's JRPM celebrations was the "75 Hours of Recreation & Parks Challenge", which challenged Albertans to discovering just how much recreation and parks matter by spending 75 hours throughout June participating in recreation & parks activities.

June is also recognized as National Indigenous History Month (NIHM) and Pride Month. In our efforts to tie together JRPM, NIHM, and Pride month we featured local events on our website. We also hosted a webinar in collaboration with the Calgary Adapted Hub on "Celebrating Inclusive Recreation in Alberta".

ARPA extends its gratitude to all municipalities, organizations, and individuals who participated in and supported JRPM 2025. Your involvement underscores the collective commitment to building vibrant communities through recreation and parks.

EVENTS

2025 ARPA Conference & Energize Workshop

This year's ARPA Conference & Energize Workshop, held October 23–25, 2025 at the Fairmont Chateau Lake Louise, centered on the theme “Beyond the Backyard”, and explored how recreation and parks can inspire local tourism, foster community pride, and strengthen connections to the places we call home.

This year's conference highlighted how recreation and parks professionals can create meaningful local experiences, from uncovering hidden gems and enhancing outdoor adventures to fostering cultural appreciation and environmental stewardship.

2026 Leaders Summit

The 2026 Leaders Summit was hosted from May 7–9, bringing together senior recreation, parks, community development, FCSS, arts and culture, and municipal leaders from across Alberta to Banff.

The program focused on the evolving role of recreation and parks and the leadership required to navigate a changing sector. Through keynote presentations, facilitated discussions, interactive sessions, and opportunities for peer connection, participants explored current trends, emerging challenges, innovative approaches, and strategies for strengthening their organizations and communities.

With leaders from communities across Alberta in attendance, the 2026 Leaders Summit reinforced ARPA's role in creating meaningful opportunities for professional development, knowledge sharing, collaboration, and leadership connection. The Summit equipped participants with new perspectives, practical ideas, and stronger networks to help them lead strategically and shape the future of recreation and parks in their communities.

2026 Parks Forum

The 2026 Parks Forum took place from March 18–20 in Edmonton, bringing together parks professionals, municipal leaders, planners, consultants, and industry partners from across Alberta. The Forum provided an opportunity for professionals working in parks and open spaces to connect, share knowledge, explore emerging practices, and consider how parks can continue to respond to the changing needs of Alberta communities.

The 2026 Parks Forum reinforced ARPA's commitment to supporting Alberta's parks professionals through professional development, sector connection, and the exchange of innovative ideas and best practices. By bringing together professionals from across the province, the Forum helped strengthen the network of people working to plan, protect, manage, and enhance Alberta's parks and open spaces.

75th Anniversary Events

2026 was a big year for ARPA - we celebrated our 75th Anniversary as an organization. To help us mark this milestone we hosted 2 free community celebration events, with one hosted in Calgary, AB, and the other in Edmonton, AB:

- June 6, 2026 | Hosted at Riverbend Community Association, Calgary, AB
- June 13, 2026 | Hosted at Northeast River Valley Park Event Centre, Edmonton, AB

We want to extend a massive thank you to everyone who joined us at our 75th Anniversary Celebration Events to help us celebrate 75 years of ARPA. From reconnecting with familiar faces to welcoming new ones these events were a true reflection of the power of recreation and parks in bringing people together.

We would also like to thank the Government of Alberta for funding provided through the Community Initiatives Program to enhance our June celebration events.

FINANCIALS & AUDIT

Treasurer's Report (2025 Fiscal)

The 2025 fiscal year presented both challenges and opportunities for ARPA. Continued support from multi-year grants provided important stability; however, inflationary pressures, reduced special project funding, and several one-time expenses impacted the year's financial results.

ARPA closed the fiscal year with revenues exceeding $2.7 million and a net operating loss of $60,700. This result reflects strategic investments in governance modernization, an unexpected conference contract attrition penalty, and the temporary impact of an Alberta Gaming, Liquor and Cannabis (AGLC) review of our charitable status and casino use of proceeds. With that review now complete, ARPA has resumed access to charitable gaming revenues under the approved use-of-proceeds framework.

Despite these challenges, the organization achieved several positive financial outcomes during the year, including:

- Growth in membership revenue.
- Continued funding for the Communities ChooseWell and Community Compass programs.
- Strong partnership with Alberta's Ministry of Tourism and Sport through both our organizational grant and the Energize program.
- Three successful multi-day education and networking events.
- Ongoing investment in reconciliation through Walking with Indigenous Communities, including support for the Elders Knowledge Circle Society.

Looking ahead, the financial environment will remain challenging as Community Compass funding concludes, grant funding remains largely static, and operating costs continue to increase. In response, the Board and staff are focused on strengthening ARPA's long-term financial sustainability through prudent fiscal management, diversified revenue sources, and an increased emphasis on fundraising, as outlined in the Association's new strategic plan.

The Board remains confident that these actions will position ARPA to continue delivering value to members while advancing recreation and parks across Alberta for years to come.
